Stress related disorders are becoming more prevalent world-wide. Whether active duty military personnel or veterans living with post traumatic stress resulting from sustained combat situations, or First Responders coping with effects of unrelenting life-threatening circumstances or peer support personnel struggling with increased workloads and the need to find more effective treatment options, stress and stress related trauma are becoming critical issues for a wide range of front-line professionals and their families. There will be representatives from the areas of Military, First Responders, Veterans, Peer Support Counselors, Educators and Families.

Displays of products and services at the Conference will provide valuable interaction between the professionals and organizations providing products and services of interest to the traumatic stress studies field.
